

Service Learning Experiences Guatemala

In June 2009, ten Xavier University students and ten practitioners traveled to Guatemala for one week. Their plan was to work with children with and without disabilities living in orphanages. They left having done so much more. The group, in collaboration with the people in Guatemala, helped empower the children to participate in their occupations.

This is the story of that group, of the relationships they fostered, and of the lives of the children they helped.
