December 10, 2014

Warmest Greetings of the Season and Best Wishes for Happiness in the New Year with Holiday Blessings

As we enter this holiday season, it allows time for reflection and an opportunity to focus on our future endeavors. During this time it may be beneficial to think about what you have learned this semester as future health care workers and how you can apply that knowledge in the workforce. Graduating seniors may begin their job search with decisions of what potential positions are of interest to them and their preferred locations to apply. This is an exciting step to move into your new roles! It is not too early to begin thinking about that process.

Juniors may be looking into internships to gain knowledge and vital experience in their major’s field of concentration. Some additional time to work on your resumes and interviewing with family and friends may give you an additional edge when the real interview for the perfect internship comes along! (Not to mention it may provide a little entertainment and discussion!)

Sophomores who have not declared a concentration in Long Term Care or Information Management will have time to research their options to enable narrowing down their selections for fall classes. And freshmen will be heading into their second semester as an early beginning in their Health Services Administration classes with thoughts of a bright future.

Your enrollment in the BSHSA program and success depends on your engagement in and out of the classroom. A deep commitment from each of you to learn, reflect and work as volunteers or in internship capacities will enrich your experience and knowledge to stand out as future employees in the health care workforce.

Wishing you continued success in the BSHSA program along with a multitude of holiday blessings this upcoming year! Happy holidays!