MALLORY MALINOSKI, Economics and International Business Major, Class of 2012
SALES ANALYST, SC JOHNSON & SON

“There was so much support from professors and faculty in the business school, and I asked a lot of them for career advice. Then I got invited by the dean to a networking luncheon of businesswomen, and the woman I sat next to is the person who gave me an interview at SC Johnson. We stayed in touch, and they hired me as an intern during my senior year with the premise that if I did well, I would get hired full time. I learned it’s really important to get to know people on campus and make connections and to break out of your comfort zone because it always pays off.”

CHANCZE LEPORE, Economics Major, Class of 2012
OPERATIONS LEADERSHIP PROGRAM, FIFTH THIRD BANK

“Xavier’s highly respected business school really drew me in, especially its executive mentor program and business professions program. You learn about résumé writing, interviewing, dinner etiquette, things to help you be successful in the business world, and it absolutely helps make you a more well-rounded individual. It helped me at Fifth Third, where I get high reviews for my presentations and email communications. I interned here my junior year and before I started my senior year, I had secured the offer with Fifth Third Bank.”

OUR UNDERGRADS THRIVE

 Ranked as one of the nation’s best business schools by Bloomberg Businessweek, The Princeton Review and U.S. News & World Report, the Williams College of Business not only provides business world knowledge and skills, but it also enriches students with a strong background in ethics, social values and professional development to enhance their career potential. The results speak for themselves.
