

Balanced Idealism

Although Mary Lu laments our global environmental and spiritual crisis, she did not seem embittered or without a sense of hope. Her idealism seemed well balanced by reasonable expectations and a practical approach only a farmer could have. She channels her frustration into growing organic food for local families.

Mary Lu pointed out that what we are going through in the world today is not only an environmental crisis. It is a spirituality crisis: “it mystifies me how we can trample the earth and feel like that we are still being spiritual people ... at its heart our environmental crisis is a spiritual crisis... for the whole earth community.”
