

my Experience

Joseph Caputi, History Major

There was a never a morning I was not excited to converse with Erin and Robert. The first time I walked into their house, I knew they were a special couple. Even early in the morning, Erin and Robert were working hard and full of excitement to find the blessings in that day. After each interview, I left their house with a different outlook on life. Their relationship with God, the earth, and most importantly one another, affected me strongly. My experience with Erin and Robert changed the way I interact with the earth. They strive to respect and remember the soil, the animals, and all living people around the world. I still cannot fathom the risks they take each day with Moriah Pie, their food crops, and their lives. The enthusiasm and love they put into all their work pushes me to become more involved in what I am doing, pursue each task to find God's love, and give gratitude to the earth and everyone in it each and every day. I cannot thank them enough for the moments we were able to share, and their connection to all life on earth.
