Today, below our daily tips on remote teaching, you will find information on a building tool, a link to our new Guidelines for Remote Courses.

Now that we have made it through our first week of remote teaching, it is time to think about ways to maintain a sense of community.

Building Class Community: AlwaysConnected

We know a lot of you are concerned about maintaining a sense of community through your remote learning. To help with this, we have added a building tool, a link to our new Guidelines for Remote Courses. In addition, we have added a tool called AlwaysConnected, which offers the following:

- A messaging system that allows you to have a more personalized and immediate communication with students.
- A social network platform that allows you to connect with students and peers.

These tools will help you assess to what extent you are:

- Maintaining regular communication with students
- Helping students manage their coursework and find information easily
- Offering a more personalized and immediate communication with students
- Creating a more interactive and engaging learning environment
- Encouraging peer-to-peer learning and collaboration

To learn more about these tools, please visit our page on AlwaysConnected.
