Media Services, and the CTE will continue to provide you with the resources you need to stay connected and engaged with your students. Today, below our daily tips on remote teaching, you will find:

- A link to a Faculty Survey: Resources and Needs for Remote Teaching. Help us understand what you need and what we can improve on. The survey will take only a few minutes to complete and will provide us with valuable feedback. [Link to survey]

- A link to a Faculty Discussion Board on Remote Teaching. Share your experiences with colleagues and get advice on how to adapt your teaching methods. [Link to discussion board]

- A link to the Meme Challenge! Share your favorite meme related to our current circumstances. [Link to meme challenge]

- A link to a How To page of the Instructional Continuity website. Find helpful resources and guidelines for remote teaching. [Link to Instructional Continuity website]

Now that we have made it through our first week of remote teaching, it’s time to reflect on what has worked—and what hasn’t. Let’s continue to work together to ensure that all students have equal access to learning and that our faculty and staff feel supported. The complete Guidelines for Remote Courses checklist can be found on our website. We will also put together a checklist of resources for remote teaching, a link to the Guidelines for Remote Courses checklist, and contact information for ID&T and DMS staff.

Leading up to our annual Digital Learning Day celebration in February, we provided you with information on training, resources, and the Instructional Continuity website, all of which have been possible without the immense work, time, and expertise of staff in Instructional Design and Technology (ID&T) and Digital Media Services (DMS). In February, we encouraged you to share your ideas and ask for suggestions, and we received a tremendous response.

Today, below our daily tips on remote teaching, you will find:

- A webinar on How To page of the Instructional Continuity website.
- A webinar on Maintaining Connection with Your Students.
- A webinar on Helping Students Manage Remote Teaching.

If you need help putting these ideas into action, we have you covered. On publishing your course, making all activities available through links in Canvas, and utilizing Canvas Calendar and To Do list functions, you will learn strategies for helping students manage their coursework and find information easily. Course design elements can help by providing clarity, motivation, and on-task performance. In this webinar, you will learn strategies for helping students manage the in-class minute in remote learning.

A hallmark of Xavier courses is the connection between instructors and students. Particularly interesting, and relevant to the remote learning environment, are strategies that help you preserve your connection with students. This webinar will focus on strategies that help you preserve your presence through options like video usage strategies. Send Paul an email at paulweber.youcanbook.me/ or schedule an appointment with him using his booking page here: [Link to booking page].

In this webinar, you will learn strategies for helping students manage the in-class minute in remote learning. How To page of the Instructional Continuity website.