Any Questions?

I want to assure you that staff in Instructional Design & Technology, Digital Media Services, and the CTE will continue to provide you with the resources you need. They have been actively working to adapt to our new remote environment and are eager to support you and your students. Some of their recent efforts include:

- A Super Team: ID&T, DMS, and the CTE
- Faculty Discussion Boards on Remote Teaching
- Faculty Survey: Resources and Needs for Remote Teaching

As you plan your final assessments for the spring semester, here are some tips and resources you might find helpful:

- Exams and Assignments (more details below).
- Academic Honesty and Canvas Exams
- Alternative assessments.
- Respondus Monitor to make your exams more secure through browser lockdowns.
- Canvas. If you plan to use Monitor, have a no-fail exam policy and create a practice exam so that you and your students are familiar with the environment? This webinar will cover several strategies for preventing or detecting academic dishonesty.
- How to create online exams through Canvas Quizzes, with the option of using Respondus Monitor to make your exams more secure through browser lockdowns.
- Academic honesty.
- Accessibility and equity.
- Student time for remote classes.
- Zoom security.

Please complete the Faculty Survey: Resources and Needs for Remote Teaching. This survey will help us understand your needs and challenges. Once completed, you will receive a survey summary and announcement of upcoming Zoom meetings and a Super Team: ID&T, DMS, and the CTE webinar on proctoring and Turnitin. The survey will be available for 2 weeks. You can also download an exam in document form and submit it as a Turnitin assignment. Canvas and Respondus Monitor are technological tools for proctoring exams. Canvas, along with Turnitin, can help you establish a solid academic honesty policy.

We are still collecting data on student time for remote classes, Zoom security, academic honesty, accessibility, and equity. Our goal is to provide resources and support to help you and your students navigate this unique experience. It is important to keep in mind that some students have significant time constraints that may impact their ability to complete assignments. Be sure to consider this when establishing due dates and deadlines.

Academic honesty is a critical component of online education, as it is in traditional classroom settings. It is particularly important in the remote learning environment, where students may face new challenges and distractions. As you plan your final assessments for the spring semester, consider the following tips:

- Exams and Assignments (more details below).
- Academic Honesty and Canvas Exams
- Alternative assessments.
- Respondus Monitor to make your exams more secure through browser lockdowns.
- Canvas. If you plan to use Monitor, have a no-fail exam policy and create a practice exam so that you and your students are familiar with the environment? This webinar will cover several strategies for preventing or detecting academic dishonesty.
- How to create online exams through Canvas Quizzes, with the option of using Respondus Monitor to make your exams more secure through browser lockdowns.
- Academic honesty.
- Accessibility and equity.
- Student time for remote classes.
- Zoom security.

Please complete the Faculty Survey: Resources and Needs for Remote Teaching. This survey will help us understand your needs and challenges. Once completed, you will receive a survey summary and announcement of upcoming Zoom meetings and a Super Team: ID&T, DMS, and the CTE webinar on proctoring and Turnitin. The survey will be available for 2 weeks. You can also download an exam in document form and submit it as a Turnitin assignment. Canvas and Respondus Monitor are technological tools for proctoring exams. Canvas, along with Turnitin, can help you establish a solid academic honesty policy.

We are still collecting data on student time for remote classes, Zoom security, academic honesty, accessibility, and equity. Our goal is to provide resources and support to help you and your students navigate this unique experience. It is important to keep in mind that some students have significant time constraints that may impact their ability to complete assignments. Be sure to consider this when establishing due dates and deadlines.

Academic honesty is a critical component of online education, as it is in traditional classroom settings. It is particularly important in the remote learning environment, where students may face new challenges and distractions. As you plan your final assessments for the spring semester, consider the following tips:

- Exams and Assignments (more details below).
- Academic Honesty and Canvas Exams
- Alternative assessments.
- Respondus Monitor to make your exams more secure through browser lockdowns.
- Canvas. If you plan to use Monitor, have a no-fail exam policy and create a practice exam so that you and your students are familiar with the environment? This webinar will cover several strategies for preventing or detecting academic dishonesty.
- How to create online exams through Canvas Quizzes, with the option of using Respondus Monitor to make your exams more secure through browser lockdowns.
- Academic honesty.
- Accessibility and equity.
- Student time for remote classes.
- Zoom security.

Please complete the Faculty Survey: Resources and Needs for Remote Teaching. This survey will help us understand your needs and challenges. Once completed, you will receive a survey summary and announcement of upcoming Zoom meetings and a Super Team: ID&T, DMS, and the CTE webinar on proctoring and Turnitin. The survey will be available for 2 weeks. You can also download an exam in document form and submit it as a Turnitin assignment. Canvas and Respondus Monitor are technological tools for proctoring exams. Canvas, along with Turnitin, can help you establish a solid academic honesty policy.