AFMIX Capstone Reflection

As my AFMIX experience comes to an end, I look back at all the wonderful experiences I have been exposed in the last two years. These experiences have allowed me to learn about Ignatian spirituality and it has brought me closer to God. Understanding that God is always present and active in my life.

Born into a Catholic family, my religious experience and education was cut short by the ascension to power of the Cuban Revolution in 1959. The new regime replaced the spiritual God with the concept of the state being God. Leaving me with an incomplete comprehension of who God was and his role in my daily life. AFMIX has allowed me to regain that knowledge. Imparting the principles of Reflection and Discernment that will guide me through a path of decisions and actions that will contribute good to my life and the life others around me

AFMIX is reflected in how I look at my work today as compared to the past. As a Computer Programmer, I have always looked at my work in terms of a Problem/Solution endeavor. My work was not personal; just a technical task to achieve a programmatic goal. My new gained knowledge has shifted that perception, of my work, from a totally impersonal task to one where the benefits of the user takes first priority. Now, I look upon my work from the perspective of not only addressing the programmatically task required; but, on how my work supports our mission statement. Indirectly, I believe that by providing reliable solutions to my clients (Either Faculty or Staff); they in turn will make our student's education a positive experience in which they can grow intellectually, morally and spiritually.

Enrolling AFMIX has been one of the best decisions I have ever made. It has been one experience that I hope will remain with me for the rest of my life.
